Management Discussion & Analysis

Business Environment

Indian cement industry is directly related to the country's infrastructure sector and thus its growth is paramount in determining the development of the country. With a current production capacity of around 366 million tonnes (MT), India is the second largest producer of cement in the world and fueled by growth in the infrastructure sector, the capacity is expected to increase to around 550 MT by FY20. The Indian cement industry is the second largest market after China and had a total capacity of over 360 million tonnes (MT) as of financial year ended 2013-14. The Indian cement industry grew at a commendable rate in the previous decade, registering a compounded growth of about 8%. However, the growth slowed down in the period 2011 to 2013 when cement consumption grew at an average rate of 4%. Moreover, the per capita consumption of cement in India still remains substantially low at about 192 kg when compared with the world average which stands at about 365 kg (excluding China). This underlines the tremendous scope for growth in the Indian cement industry in the long term

Opportunity & Threats

India has a lot of potential for development in the infrastructure and construction sector and the cement sector is expected to largely benefit from it. Some of the recent major government initiatives such as development of 100 smart cities are expected to provide a major boost to the sector. Another factor which aids the growth of this sector is the ready availability of the raw materials for making cement, such as limestone and coal.

However, coal prices witnessed significant decline in past few months. Imported coal prices started moving south-wards and have reached $66.68 per metric ton at the end of December 2014, down by 26.21 per cent as compared to $90.36 per metric tonne in December 2013. The downward movement in coal prices is likely to have a positive impact on the margins of the cement companies, particularly those which depend more on imported coal.

Cement demand was also impacted by cut down in government spending during January-March 2015 quarter, muted demand from real estate and construction projects and slow recovery in infrastructure spending.

However, the presence of a stable pro-growth government at the Centre has improved the sentiment, but the results of policy initiatives taken by the new government will take time to materialise.

Outlook

The cement industry in India is globally competitive as the industry continues to witness positive trends such as cost control, continuous technology upgradation and increased construction activities. Major cement manufacturers in India are also increasingly using alternate fuels, especially bio-energy, to fire their kilns. This is not only helping to bring down production costs of cement companies, but is also proving effective in reducing emissions. Meanwhile, with the Government of India providing a boost to the infrastructure and various housing projects coming up in urban as well as rural areas, the cement sector has enough scope for development in the future. The weakness in the international crude oil prices and other commodities such as Coal should help bring costs under control and improve profitability of the sector. Higher government spending on infrastructure, robust growth in rural housing and rising per capita incomes are likely to augur well for the cement sector. Moreover, steep rise in cement prices too help cement manufacturer to improve their profit margin. Riding high on the improvement in infrastructure, investment cycle and overall economy, the demand for cement is likely to grow by nearly 6.5-7 percent during FY16

Risk & Concern

Further, decline in kharif crops production owing to poor monsoons affected agricultural incomes and post-monsoon rural demand for cement for housing and other purposes. Indian cement industry is energy intensive in nature, as power is an important cost factor, about 30 per cent of total expenses are being spent on power and energy needs of the plant. Thus, many large companies resort to captive power plants in order to reduce the power costs, as this source is economical and results in continual supply of power. Therefore, higher the captive power consumption of the company, the better it is for the company. Access and proximity to raw materials (limestone and coal) and consuming markets are very important as it is extremely bulky commodity.
